

SKADAR LAKE

National Park "Skadar Lake"

Covering an area of 391 km², Lake Skadar is the largest lake in the Balkans, and is located in the Zeta-Skadar basin and connected with the Adriatic Sea by the River Bojana. The part of the lake that belongs to Montenegro, together with its coastal region, became a national park in 1983. At the Ramsar Convention of 1996, it joined the World List of Wetlands of International Importance.

Its shores are rugged and rich in coves, peninsulas and capes, mainly covered by a wide area of reed. Lake Skadar is a protected area, a genuine realm of ecology, an oasis of silence and a place to be in contact with intact nature. It is a very rich eco-system, and the only habitat of Dalmatian pelican in Southern Europe. Some autochthonous species of bleak and carp live here, and the lake is also the habitat of the water caltrop, which is a protected plant.

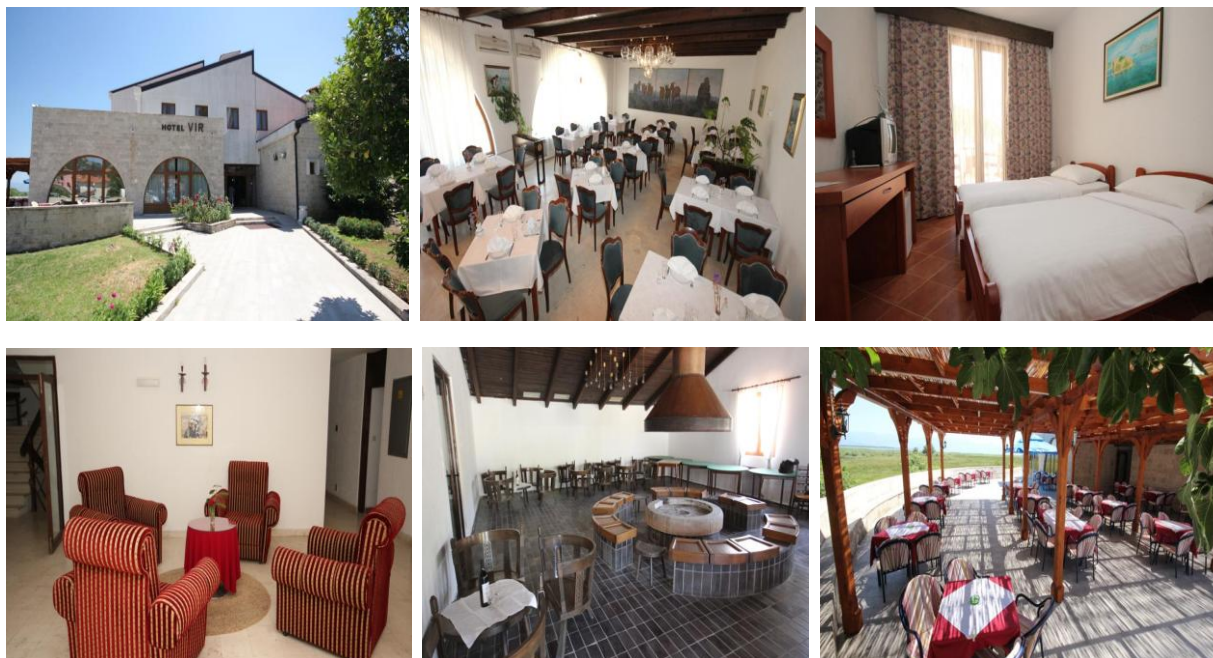

There is the old town of Rijeka Crnojevica on the lakeshore, and the remains of the town of Obod, and the ruins of the printing house that printed the first book in this part of Europe "Oktoih" in 1494, are in the vicinity.

Along the main road and the rail line, there is Virpazar on the shore, which is the largest inhabited place on the lake, while the old town of Zabljak Crnojevica is nearby.

The Orthodox monasteries and churches on the islets of Starcevo, Beska and Moracnik, as well as the many cultural and historical monuments, fortifications, archaeological sites in the surroundings of Lake Skadar testify that this region has a rich history and culture.
